Definitions:

Pseudonymisation: Pseudonymisation refers to the activity of replacing identifying fields by a made up label or handle, typically something created specifically for this purpose. A major advantage of pseudonymisation over anonymisation is that it may allow data records generated for the same individual to be linked together via the same pseudonym, thus enriching the ability to analyse the data, track trends over time etc. However, this aspect may also increase the risk that the pseudonymisation fails, and that the underlying identity of the individual is recovered. Questions of how frequently the pseudonym changes (always the same pseudonym for the same individual, or does it change every day, every hour etc.?) can be very important here.

Encryption: the process of converting information or data into a code especially to prevent unauthorised access. In cryptography, encryption is the process of encoding information. This process converts the original representation of the information, known as plaintext, into an alternative form known as ciphertext. Ideally, only authorized parties can decipher a ciphertext back to plaintext and access the original information.

Aggregation: Aggregation is where detailed sensitive information is replaced by less detailed information, where multiple input values are "lumped together". For example, rather than giving the dates of birth of each child in a school, you could say how many children were born in each month. Partial redaction or partial masking can be a form of aggregation.

Anonymisation: Anonymisation refers to the activity of removing or obscuring fields in a data set, where such fields either directly identify an individual to which the data pertains, or could be easily used to identify that individual given other generally-available data. Examples of such data fields include a full name, a postal address, a phone number, a date of birth, a national insurance or social security number, or combinations of these. Another term sometimes used for this is "scrubbing" the data. Releasing only aggregate data from the data set (or averaged data, or data about the numbers of people in broad ranges or "bins") also counts as a form of anonymisation.

For example, rather than giving the dates of birth of each child in a school, you could say how many children were born in each month. Partial redaction or partial masking can be a form of aggregation.

Anonymisation: Anonymisation refers to the activity of removing or obscuring fields in a data set, where such fields either directly identify an individual to which the data pertains, or could be easily used to identify that individual given other generally-available data. Examples of such data fields include a full name, a postal address, a phone number, a date of birth, a national insurance or social security number, or combinations of these. Another term sometimes used for this is "scrubbing" the data. Releasing only aggregate data from the data set (or averaged data, or data about the numbers of people in broad ranges or "bins") also counts as a form of anonymisation.

Definitions:

Pseudonymisation: Pseudonymisation refers to the activity of replacing identifying fields by a made up label or handle, typically something created specifically for this purpose. A major advantage of pseudonymisation over anonymisation is that it may allow data records generated for the same individual to be linked together via the same pseudonym, thus enriching the ability to analyse the data, track trends over time etc. However, this aspect may also increase the risk that the pseudonymisation fails, and that the underlying identity of the individual is recovered. Questions of how frequently the pseudonym changes (always the same pseudonym for the same individual, or does it change every day, every hour etc.?) can be very important here.

Encryption: the process of converting information or data into a code especially to prevent unauthorised access. In cryptography, encryption is the process of encoding information. This process converts the original representation of the information, known as plaintext, into an alternative form known as ciphertext. Ideally, only authorized parties can decipher a ciphertext back to plaintext and access the original information.

Aggregation: Aggregation is where detailed sensitive information is replaced by less detailed information, where multiple input values are "lumped together". For example, rather than giving the dates of birth of each child in a school, you could say how many children were born in each month. Partial redaction or partial masking can be a form of aggregation.

Anonymisation: Anonymisation refers to the activity of removing or obscuring fields in a data set, where such fields either directly identify an individual to which the data pertains, or could be easily used to identify that individual given other generally-available data. This process converts the original representation of the information, known as plaintext, into an alternative form known as ciphertext. Ideally, only authorized parties can decipher a ciphertext back to plaintext and access the original information.

Aggregation: Aggregation is where detailed sensitive information is replaced by less detailed information, where multiple input values are "lumped together". For example, rather than giving the dates of birth of each child in a school, you could say how many children were born in each month. Partial redaction or partial masking can be a form of aggregation.

Anonymisation: Anonymisation refers to the activity of removing or obscuring fields in a data set, where such fields either directly identify an individual to which the data pertains, or could be easily used to identify that individual given other generally-available data. Examples of such data fields include a full name, a postal address, a phone number, a date of birth, a national insurance or social security number, or combinations of these. Another term sometimes used for this is "scrubbing" the data. Releasing only aggregate data from the data set (or averaged data, or data about the numbers of people in broad ranges or "bins") also counts as a form of anonymisation.

Please provide justification in the explanation box.

Response

10.3 Please select the condition under which special category of personal data can be processed.

NOTE: Applicable only when special categories of data are processed.

Difference between the Not Applicable options:

- 'Not Applicable' should be selected when you are obliged to define the lawful basis (e.g. when Data Controller) but there is no special category of personal data processed.
- 'Not applicable as Processor' should be selected when - as Data Processor - you are relying on the lawful basis of the Data Controller.

Response

10.4 Does the processing include any of the following?

The DPIA checklist is a list of processing activities that are likely to result in high risks to the rights and freedoms of individuals. If a processing activity satisfies any of the characteristics, it is deemed of high risk and performance of privacy assessment is mandatory.

GUIDE FOR SELECTING THE RELEVANT DPIA OPTIONS

Other questions responded by the business may help you to identify the relevant options, such questions are as follows:

- Special Data Subjects: 'Processing of data concerning vulnerable individuals' is relevant if 'Children', 'Elderly' or 'People with limited mental capacity' are identified as special data subjects
- Number of Data Subjects: 'Data processing on a large scale' is relevant if number of data subjects is higher than 40% of the relevant population
- Related Data Elements: 'Processing of sensitive data or data of a highly personal nature' is relevant if high risk personal data is processed - please see risk profiling in the PDPR inventory breakdown spreadsheet (available here) or check if any high risk is flagged within the questionnaire
- Special processing elements: please see the mapping of Special Processing Elements with the DPIA options in the PDPR inventory breakdown spreadsheet (available here)

11.2 Please select all applicable options to continue with the necessary assessment.

If an assessment (TIA, LIA or HRIA) is already completed please attach the assessment and fill in the relevant question in the relevant assessment section before you send back the questionnaire to the respondent (if any other assessment should be completed).

If assessment(s) is/are completed by Group and no localisation needed (i.e. the Group assessment covers all features of the locally implemented process, e.g. no local systems or suppliers involved), please refer and attach the assessment in the next question.

DECISION GUIDE:

PIA is required for

- All high and medium risk processing activities (incl. processes and products)
- All high and medium risk assets
- All high and medium risk one-off projects

*Recommended: considering Special Processing Elements to decide if PIA is required - suggestions are available in the PDPR Inventory breakdown spreadsheet
Note: PIA is not to be conducted in case of Vendor Inventory records.*

*TIA is required if EU data transferred/processed outside the EEA (Vodafone internal and external data transfer).
TIAs completed by Group Privacy (VOIS TIAs) are available in the central repository.*

LIA is required if the lawful basis is legitimate interest.

*HRIA is required to be decided by the Privacy assessor but likely to be required where there is a high risk to the rights and freedoms of individuals which includes systematic and extensive profiling with significant effects, large scale use of sensitive data and public monitoring or surveillance.
The following scenarios may trigger a HRIA - detailed guidance is available here (tbd):*

- new market entry
- creating a new partnership or acquisition
- change in operating environment
- creating new products and services or substantial changes to existing portfolio
- higher risk sales

End of Life review is required in case of:

- termination of the personal data processing - i.e. a process or product is discontinued
- termination of engagement with a supplier
- termination of engagement with in internal VF entity

13. LEGITIMATE INTEREST ASSESSMENT

13.1 Welcome to our Legitimate Interest Assessment review!

Legitimate interests is one of the six lawful bases for processing personal data. Ahead of any personal data processing, lawful basis must be identified. In order to rely on legitimate interests as lawful basis, Legitimate Interest Assessment (LIA) must be conducted in order to justify that the purpose of processing is necessary, proportionate and does not override the interests and fundamental rights of individuals.

The following questions will support us to decide whether or not the legitimate interests basis is likely to apply to the personal data processing in question. The LIA consists of 3 main parts:

- Purpose test: to identify the legitimate interest(s)
- Necessity test: to verify that the processing is necessary for the purpose
- Balancing test: to review the impact of the processing and if the individual's interests override the legitimate interest

Please answer the below questions and provide as much details as you can. The Privacy Assessor will review your responses and contact you in case further clarification is needed.

19.35 Is the data entered into the asset Pseudo-Anonymised?

Please note, it is applicable if only anonymous use cases apply.

Pseudo-Anonymisation refers to irreversible de-identification of unique IDs while still having unique, persistent identifiers (hashed, salted). Depending on the data base and ability to do cross-correlation with other data bases, pseudoanonymisation does NOT make data anonymous (e.g. UUID + location + time stamp, collected over time, makes data identifiable in many cases).

☐ Yes
 ☐ No
 ☐ Not sure

19.36 Are all the below requirements applied to the pseudo-anonymisation within the asset?

4. Effective controls are implemented to prevent access to the salt key by any individual having access to the pseudo-anonymised data.
5. The real user identifiers (such as MSISDN, IMEI, IMSI, name, street address) are automatically deleted from any data sets on the asset.
6. Salt is renewed frequently (default, in absence of any other considerations: at least every 30 days.)

 ☐ NONE of the requirements apply
 ☐ Not sure

19.37 Is the data entered into the asset Pseudonymised?

Pseudonymisation refers to reversible de-identification of personal data, for example by maintaining a key which can be used to re-identify hashed identifiers. Pseudonymisation consists of replacing one persistent attribute (typically a unique attribute) in a record by another persistent unique ID and maintaining a key to enable re-identification. Accordingly, pseudonymisation, when used alone, will not result in an anonymous dataset. Pseudonymisation reduces the linkability of a dataset with the original identity of a data subject; as such, it is a useful security measure but not a method of anonymisation.

19.38 Are all the below requirements applied to the pseudonymisation within the asset?

3. The key required to re-identify the data is kept strictly separate from those who process the data (e.g. data analysts do not have access to the re-identification keys), and access to the keys is strictly restricted.
4. Effective technical and organizational controls are implemented to prevent unauthorized or accidental re-identification of the Pseudonymous data.

20.10 Is contract in place which sets out the roles and responsibilities of the parties for personal data processing?

The contract shall define the relation within the data sharing: controller to controller, joint-controller, or controller to processor. This depends on the business model in question. For example, if Vodafone has commissioned a third party to compile such a data base for Vodafone, then the 3rd party is likely to be a processor and Vodafone entity in question a controller. If, however, the third party has collected the data to its own data bases for the purpose of sharing the data to multiple customers, then the 3rd party is likely to be a controller, and Vodafone is likely to also be a controller. 24.5 Does an agreement between the joint controllers exist?

Joint controllers need to set "who does what" by deciding between themselves who will have to carry out which tasks in order to make sure that the processing complies with the applicable obligations under the GDPR. These are the followings:

- Privacy statement
- Security measures
- Notification of data breach to regulators and to data subjects
- Data Protection Impact Assessment

- Transfers of data to third countries
- Contacts with data subjects and with data protection authorities

Basic approach is that the Global PIA determines the way GDPR art 5 privacy principles are managed. In addition, applicable Privacy Baseline Requirements, Detailed Requirement, Privacy Patterns and other such documents formally part of Vodafone Privacy Policy structure determine the Privacy by Design of the Product/ Process / Platform in question.

- Lawfulness, Fairness, Transparency
